

A LETTER TO TRIBAL LEADERS:

The medical marijuana patients of Nevada beseech Native Americans, who have a great respect for the natural world, to NOT outlaw, but allow for the home-growing of cannabis on your reservations. As the community's most vulnerable constituents, there's excellent reason why medical patients have fought most earnestly so that our people should be allowed to eat freshly grown cannabis without ANY fear of legal retribution or persecution. That any government should restrict individuals from consuming this all-natural, non-toxic plant which has been shown to be able to medically help so many, JUST because it means bigger profits to criminalize users instead... well, that's something cannabis patients feel is unconscionable.

Greed is a type of insanity that's known to be highly contagious, and not traditionally a part of the Native American culture. Which is why medical cannabis patients implore you, as leaders to do better for your people than you're being shown, by this government. We want you to know that the sharing of cannabis seeds, clones, and plants is an imperative freedom if anyone is to learn about consuming cannabis for truly healthful reasons.

Thank you for hearing the patients' concerns, we wish you all the best health AND wealth!
